Motion to reduce costs for travels of the President and attendances at events

All other Official have similar problems, especially when attending many events also. Will they get an account also. They have to go through the same procedure and do not get their money reimbursed quicker, either.

That IPC establish a fully accountable imprest account for the IPC President of €10,000 to address the high personal cash flow impost caused by booking airline tickets early to avail of the best price, with reimbursement only available after the event.

The solution of the problem is to reduce the number of self-attendances by delegating tasks of representation to persons within IPC, who are connected to an event already, are apt for the job and are located closer.

Explanation of the effects and benefits of such attendance should be demonstrated.
